The temporary closure on Highway 401 will likely cause major headaches for commuters and local business owners in the Greater Toronto Area. The closure of all eastbound lanes of Highway 401 will start at 8 a.m. Friday as crews begin to repair the rail barrier that fell overnight, which has led to a horrific toll on a busy suburban highway. The closure also affects all eastbound traffic on the Don Valley Parkway, which has been closed since Wednesday evening, when crews found that a portion of the rail barrier had fallen on the roadway. "It's been a nightmare for us," said Corey Fornash, the deputy director of Metrolinx, the transit agency that oversees the highways. "We'll do everything we can to keep our traffic moving as quickly as possible. But right now we're in a situation where the barriers are down, the barriers have fallen, and we have no way to get access into the rail bed to fix them." Mike Taylor, a spokesman for Metrolinx, says the agency is working as quickly as possible to get the traffic situation under control. The agency is in touch with the public works department, which will help detour traffic around the area. Metrolinx says the rail between the Port Lands and Green Pines will remain closed while the railway worker is on the job and for a day after. The agency hopes to restore full service as soon as possible. The Toronto Transit Commission says in a statement it is doing everything in its power to provide ongoing updates to users of the TTC, particularly during rush hour. Meanwhile, residents and business owners in the area are worried about the effect a closing highway will have on their businesses. Jennifer Maclachlan owns a hair-braiding salon located on Highway 401 in the city's west end. She says the shop is directly next to

What's new in Zombie Training Simulator:

2 launched on Oculus Rift on Christmas Eve, and while I've been hands-on with the game, I haven't had the chance to review its visuals and gameplay yet. But a recent batch of screenshots showing some gameplay details in virtual reality should give you an idea of how one of the most important aspects of a VR game looks. Zombie Training Simulator 2's visuals are one of its strong points. While it seems to lack in A/V fidelity compared to the visually outstanding Vacation Simulator 2, the wealth of zombie graphical effects that the game is known for are well-detailed and put to good use. Here's a brief overview of how things look when I head over to the tutorial's never-ending zombie-filled street. And here are the most crucial details: We get an overview of the game: That only barely scratches the surface, and the rest is in the gameplay screenshots below. So without further ado, let's jump into it!

Equipment Overview An early word of warning: Zombie Training Simulator 2 features a seven-hour tutorial phase that will undoubtedly drain all of your willpower. (The special bonus achievements that are unlocked after the tutorial phase are a nice gesture.) If you want to jump right into the fun, I'd recommend turning it on, disconnecting the VR headset, and doing all your homework for the day... You'll start by outfitting yourself with the necessary hardware. After that's done, our guide will walk you through an online tutorial that will teach you how to play the game in a step-by-step manner. Here's your character and their various equipment (as reviewed separately):

Weapons The first thing you'll need to customize on your character are your melee weapons. Here, you can select the preferred weapon of a given category. Your character will start off with two melee weapons in his or her arsenal. Said weapons will swap between hands automatically once you hold a button, requiring no activation from your part.

Knife & hatchet With the knife, you'll be able to chop down objects and people that are touching you. Both melee weapons will turn into axes when you hold a button, and you can perform different moves when in this state. This weapon is primarily single-hand equivalent to the baseball bat though, and does not currently include any sort of melee
